Looking stylish, Giselle Ghofrani ('06), Rosanna Stoia ('05), and Sul Ki Lee ('06) all show off their great style. It looks like we have some future models walking around the halls of Niles West.

Style Watch

Ever notice those yellow "LIVESTRONG" bracelets that people have been wearing? For a good cause, these one-dollar Lance Armstrong bracelets can be yours, too.

As we all know, there is a lot of cultural diversity in the halls of Niles West. There is much diversity in our fashion world as well. From those who follow the fashion styles to those who love fashion ingenuity, from those who set all the trends to those who just don't seem to care, there is a place for everyone. The best part about Niles West's fashion trends is that no one criticizes anyone about their clothing. The guys at West are just as fashion conscious as their female counterparts. Most people define their personalities with their own unique sense of style. Many students are not afraid of showing their true colors to the rest of the school, and their fashion sense is what sets them apart from ordinary jeans and sweatshirts. The array of colors and unique fashions help to brighten what might have been a dull day. The good thing is, one can wear "bummy" clothes one day and be all dolled up the next day, and it will not make a difference to one's social status at Niles West High School.

> "Jeans with holes in them is one of the latest trends. The funny part is they seem to cost more."
> KIMBERLY KOTSOVOS ('05)

An off-the-shoulder shirt with a cut off mini-skirt is the perfect combination for an outfit these days at West. Lauren Wegner ('05) is obviously very happy that she is such a stylish girl.

What is your favorite article of clothing?

"It's a black Third Day T-shirt with the band on the front–the best band ever!"

CHRISTIE FOX ('05)

"My orange shirt. It's orange and it's mine."

AJ ERNST ('07)

"My brown sweater, because I get a lot of compliments on it from the ladies."

JESSI SANCHEZ ('05)

"My pink Guess skirt, because I love pink."

ALEXANDRA SOLOMAN ('08)

"I love my fake Birkenstocks, because everyone thinks they are real."

ANONYMOUS

Left: Afraid of color? I think not. Jency George ('07) dares to be bold in her neon green top and ruffled pink skirt.

Summer

This summer, over 2000 people from 42 different countries met in Korea for a world retreat called IYF. Paul Barbato ('05) was one of the representatives from the USA. Here he is in front of Yong in Palace, which is over 2000 years old.

Adventures Always Await

Juniors Julie Rysemus, Nadine Isho, Christina Benetatos, and Noelle Paule watch the fireworks at Niles West on the Fourth of July.

Ah, summer...mention that word and some students' faces light up with mega-watt smiles, while others grimace at the thought of what awaits them--summer school, work, and other such bothersome activities. Some people love it as a respite from school--others dread it as many weeks of work, either at their places of employment or at school.

Some take summer school because they have to, others because they want to get credits out of the way and open up their schedule for the following year. "I didn't like summer school, but at least I got some classes out of the way," said Samaneh Kabul ('06). For whatever reasons students take summer school, all agree that it's not the most exciting thing to do over the summer.

> "I didn't like summer school, but at least I got some classes out of the way."
> SAMANEH KABUL ('06)

Work isn't always that exciting either. Although some people like working, others do it out of necessity. But summer is not all about work and school. Most people use the ample time they have over the summer to relax and do nothing, like hanging out with friends.

A lot of people also take the time to travel, either around the country or to different places around the world. Whatever the location or activity, adventures always await.

Aah, summer--too bad it only comes once a year.

Caitlin Scheib ('06) turned 16 this summer and guess what her present was–a trip to the Bristol Renaissance Faire in Wisconsin with Kirsten Schramm ('06), where they got to ride on an elephant together.

Above: Adina Klein ('05) spent her summer as a camp counselor at a JCC. Those kids are so adorable!

Left: Syema Sheikh ('05) and Maham Lodhi ('05) went to New York City for Syema's cousin's wedding. While there, they had time to go to Times Square.

Semira Odzic ('06) and Selma Cantic ('05) spent their summer with their friend in Montenegro. After a long day at the beach, they enjoy drinks at the local cafe in Plavi Jadran.

What was the most exciting thing you did over the summer?

"I went skydiving in Wisconsin."

MARCO MEDINA ('05)

"I scraped my legs on the top of a fence sneaking into a pool at night with my friends."

CHRISTIE FOX ('05)

"I went to the Wisconsin Dells. Who can complain about going to a water park every day for a week?"

ANDREY MELIKHOV ('05)

"I went to New York City, Washington D.C., and Niagara Falls."

JENCY VATHIKULAM ('06)

"I told my parents I was staying at a friend's house, but I drove to Canada instead."

GUST GIANOS ('05)

Juniors Jack Targos and Nelson Falkovitz aren't going anywhere. Valentina Vulcu ('06), Amy Melamed ('06), and Olivia Chuchiro ('06) seem happy about that.

Traumarama

"It was the third week of freshman year and my friends and I were running to the vending machines because we only had two minutes left before break ended. On my way there, I somehow ran right into the center pole and my face smacked right into it. My face became scarlet red and my friend was dying of laughter." Ouch!

Beyond School

Junior Cabinet members work hard trying to sell wolf hats outside the cafeteria. Aw, look at the persuading smiles of these saleswomen. Who wouldn't want a wolf hat?

Life After 3:00

Nick Lanzourakis ('06) works in the computer lab to finish up some homework after school.

Every day after school gets out, students scramble to activities of all kinds, and usually, getting home to do homework is not one of them. In reality, 3:00 is the start of most students' days. After a long day of classes come clubs, practice, jobs, homework, and more. The wide range of extracurricular activities has students bouncing from activity to activity. Stevan Jovcic ('06) goes off to soccer practice, Mark Chauhan ('05) goes to Auto Club, Daniel Rosenthal ('05) heads off to theatre, and Cheryl Nowak ('06) helps set up the biology labs.

"In reality, 3:00 is the start of most students' days."

Almost everybody has some type of activity or club to keep them busy long after the regular school day is over. If it's not a sport or club, it could be volunteer work or helping a teacher. Finally, when students do get home after all of these activities, they have hours of homework each night. And after a tiring night at work or a tough practice, that is the last thing on students' minds. It just seems as if there are not enough hours in the day to get everything that's necessary done. When a student finally gets in a couple hours of shut eye at night, he wakes up to have the cycle repeat itself the next day.

These two freshman girls wait in line at the Writing Center to get some after school help from a teacher.

What is your favorite after school activity?

"Eat, watch TV, sleep...repeat..."
BIANCA STEPAN ('06)

"Homework. Ha ha...just kidding. Playing any kind of sport."
LOIS KWON ('05)

"After school, I go to football practice. We usually run or something like that. Running isn't fun."
AMIN LAKHANI ('07)

"After school, I work at Sylvan Learning Center. It's a lot of work, but at the end of the day, I feel like I accomplished something."
ROMMEL CUEVO ('05)

"After school, I'm usually at practice or running laps. It's tiring, but in the end, it's all for the better."

Kiley Wagner ('06), Robyn Reuter ('06), Martha Scheler ('06), and Melanie Bonafacio ('06) enjoy a break from school to have a meal at the mall.

Organization is key! This is true according to Maya George ('06), who spends time after school sorting through her assignment book, planning that night's homework.

Siblings

Virginia ('05), Natalie ('07), and Yvonne ('05) Palmer spend their summers splashing around in Lake Koshkonog.

Has anyone ever repeatedly called you by your sibling's name, despite the fact that you've corrected him time and time again? If so, you are not alone. When you go to the same school as your sibling, you will most likely face competition, embarrassment, and arguments on a daily basis. But there are also some advantages to having a sibling in the same school.

For example, all those younger siblings don't have to worry about taking the bus or walking home. Luckily for them, they have an older sibling with a car to take care of that problem. Some share a much stronger bond; they might even consider each other best friends. Whether or not the bond between siblings is good or bad, they will always share a unique, special connection.

Yuriy ('05) and Julia ('06) Drubinskaya take a time out from riding roller coasters at Six Flags to smile for the camera.

Extreme Sports

"I've been dirt-biking for two years now, and I picked it up like it was nothing," said Brandon Wishnoff ('07). "I went from barely balancing the bike, to doing wheelies in all five gears without putting the front wheel down...but it hurts pretty bad when you fall. I have eight scars on my arms and legs to prove it."

Take it to the Max

Carolynn Witt ('05) relaxes in the still water as she takes a break from the whitewater rapids during a camping trip this summer.

How daring do you think Niles West students really are? With just over 2,500 students, one would guess that we have quite a few daredevils in our midst, and they'd be right. From the most extreme students who have gone skydiving, bungee jumping, and rock climbing, to the more conservative ones who go surfing, scuba diving, wakeboarding, horseback riding, skiing, and more, we have an endless array of risk-takers.

The thing that attracts so many students to do these often dangerous feats is a combination of the thrill, the adrenaline rush, and just being able to say that they've done something death-defying. Not only do you get bragging rights after performing feats such as these, you get the satisfaction of knowing you pushed yourself to the limit--and won.

> "I like to live my life to the fullest. No regrets."
> VALENTINA VULCU ('06)

If you're one of the people who's done anything extreme, you don't need to read mere words to describe what it feels like. If you're one of the people who hasn't even tried something mildly extreme, just give it a try. Even if the wildest thing you'll ever do is strap on a pair of skis and cruise down a green circle run, give it a shot. You'll be surprised how easy it is to get hooked.

Eleanor Itzkow ('05) has always been an animal lover, but horses are her favorite. She's a western rider who has eight years of experience, riding bareback and with a saddle. She's riding her dapple grey horse, Burt, and it's obvious by her smile that she's enjoying every minute of it.

Above: The Palmers started skiing at the age of 5, and started competing at 8. Here, they pose by the scenery in Vail, CO.

When Allison Lovering ('07) went to California, she decided to have some fun in the sun by learning how to surf. It's obvious that she's a quick learner; she already looks like a pro.

What's the most extreme thing you've ever done?

"It was probably when I went bungee jumping. What a ride! I'd love to do it again. It's like you're flying, but someone pushed you off a building at the same time."

AMBER STOKER ('07)

"When I was little, I thought skiing was really extreme, but now I realize that it was just a vacation."

JIMMY ZHU ('05)

"I went scuba diving in Hawaii and it made me jealous of mermaids."

SWATI PATEL ('05)

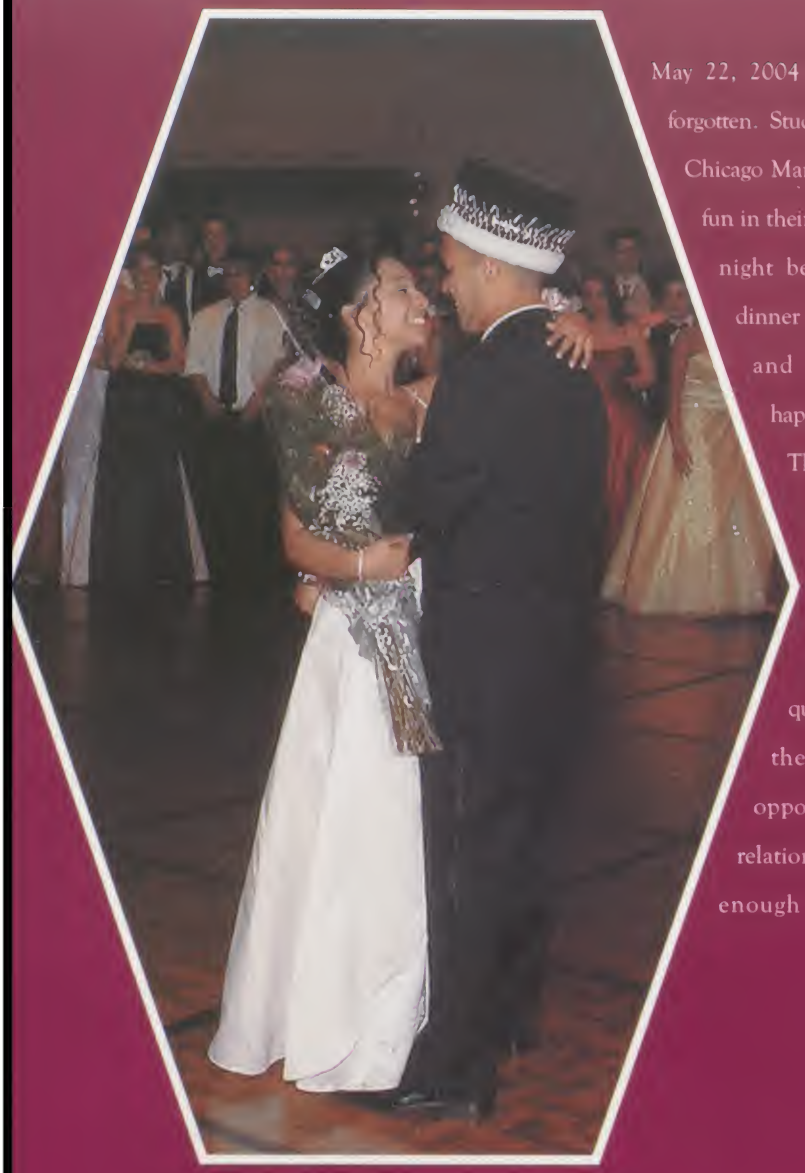
"In California, I jumped off a 5-story cliff into a lake. Jumping off that cliff was the scariest thing I've ever done in my life, but it was soooo much fun! I'd do it again in a heartbeat."

REBECCA DEREX ('07)

Jonathan Kuninsky ('05) got to do some backpacking during his trip to New Mexico where he did conservation field work.

Special Events

R



May 22, 2004 was a night not to be forgotten. Students crowded around the Chicago Marriott, eager for a night of fun in their most elegant attire. The night began with an exquisite dinner in the hotel's ballroom, and ended with tears of happiness from many seniors. The excitement reached its peak with the announcement of Stephanie Persaud and Omar Salem as prom queen and king. For many, the night was one last opportunity to cherish the relationships they were lucky enough to have.

Right: Finally, the excitement of the night begins. Everyone awaits the crowning of the prom king and queen as the nominees gather around the stage.
Far Right: What a sweet date. Vicki Jimenez ('04) kindly takes a break from dancing to fix Gabe Candea's ('04) boutonniere.

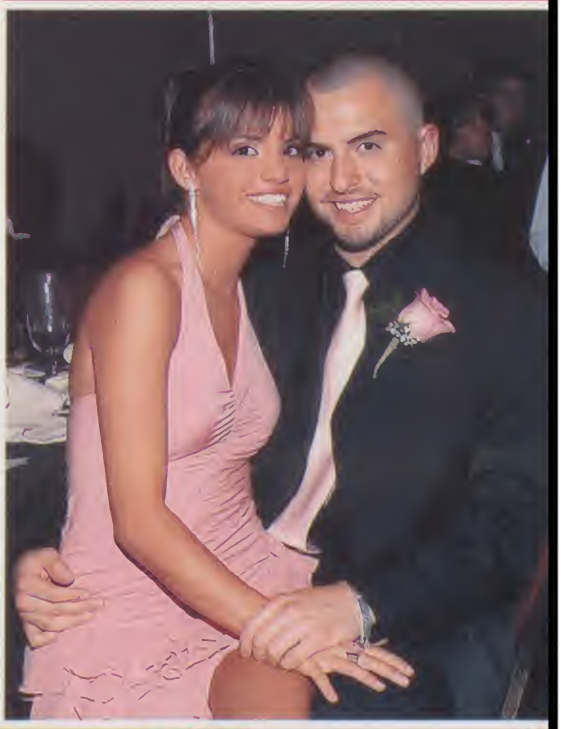
Prom Night 2004

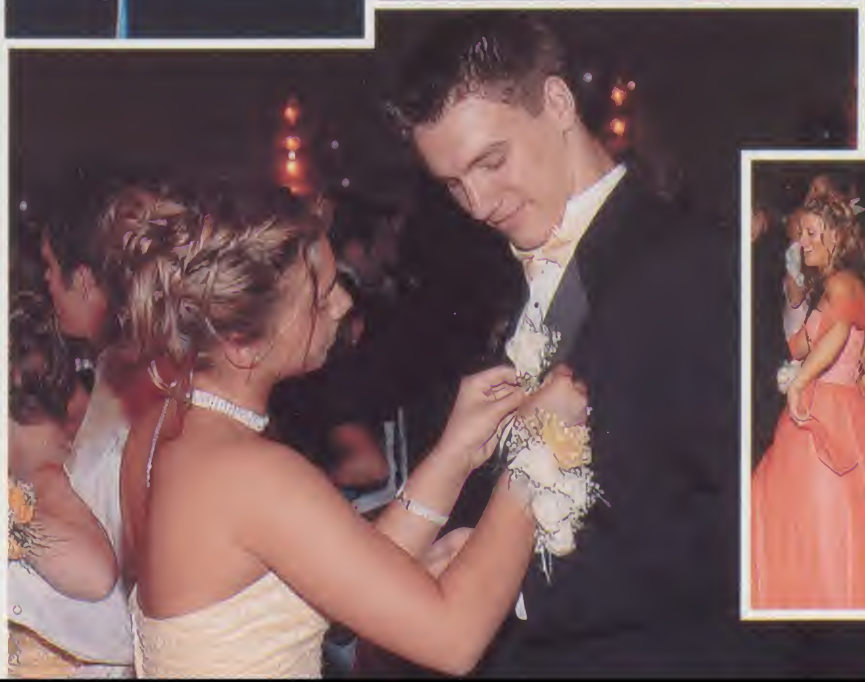
"Still..."

Left: Check these guys out. You can tell that former Seniors Jacob Gecht, Michael Noonan, Jesse Footlik, and Jack Gould are having a great time.

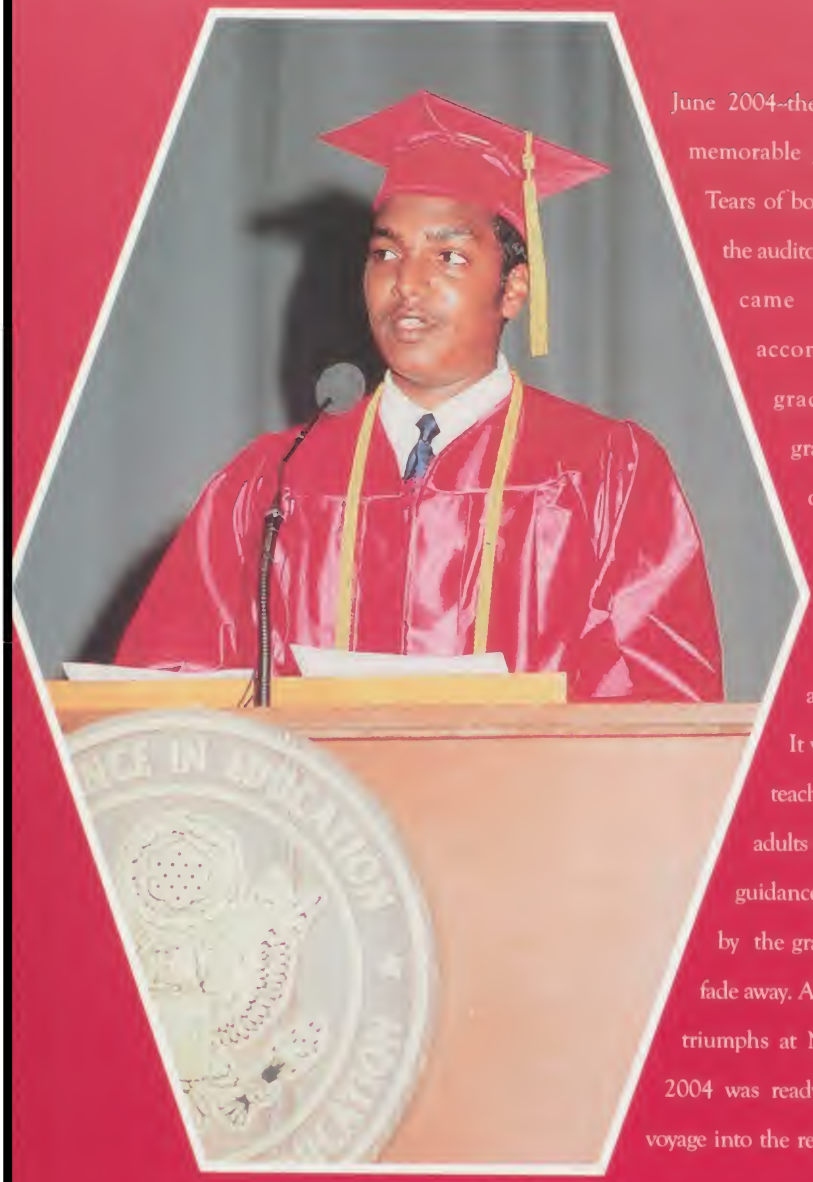
Bottom: As the night starts to get crazy, these two guys jump at the opportunity to get on stage with the band. Jarryd Loyd ('04) and Peter Drebos ('04) excitedly pump up the crowd just before the night comes to an end.

Bottom: Former Seniors Christina Sidiropoulos and Eli Barba find time to take a quick picture. As this couple looks back on high school, prom will be an important night to remember.





Showing off dresses in every imaginable shade of pink, blue, and yellow, girls happily danced the night away with their dates. Guys in the latest suits and tuxedos impressed the crowd. Each couple glowed as they made their way across the floor.



June 2004–the senior class ended its memorable journey at Niles West. Tears of both joy and sadness filled the auditorium. Family and friends came to celebrate the accomplishments of the graduating class. This graduation was a special one, especially in the standing ovation given to Michael Pantazis, who was unable to attend and sorely missed. It was also at this time that teachers and parents saw the adults formed as a result of their guidance. The memories created by the graduating class will never fade away. After many hardships and triumphs at Niles West, the class of 2004 was ready to embark on a new voyage into the real world.

Graduation

The End of An Era

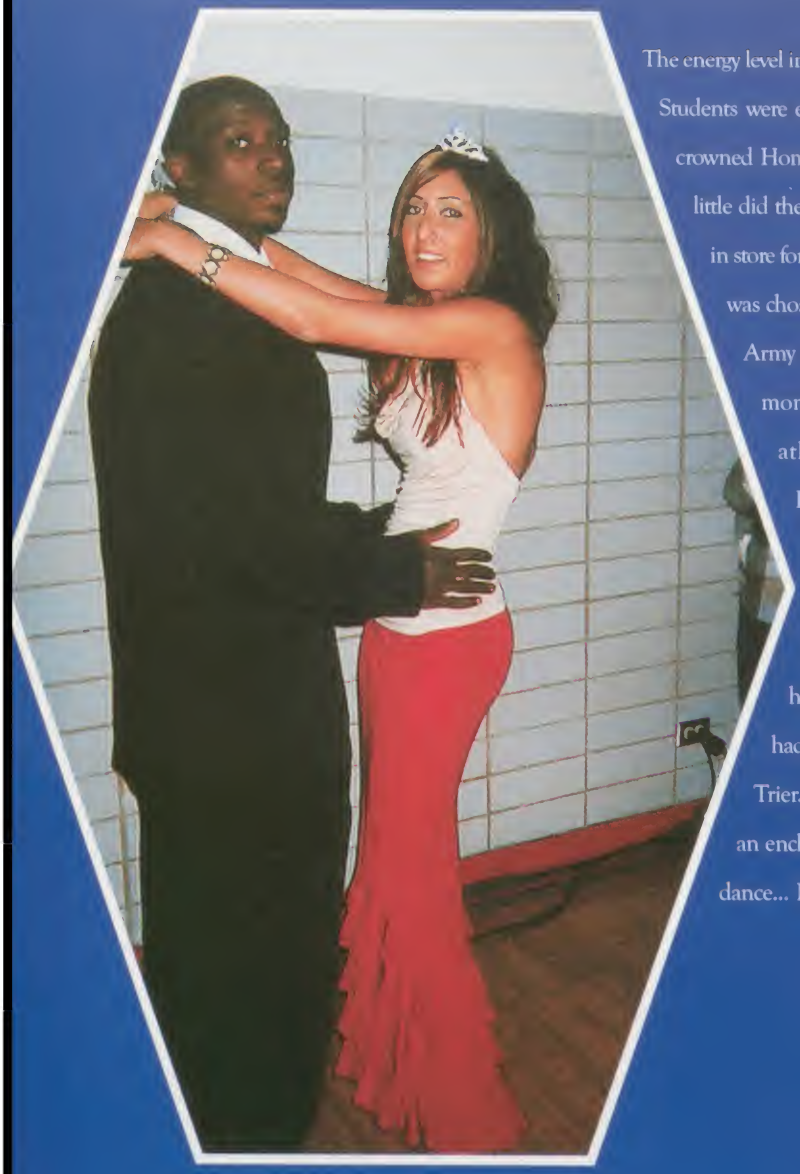
Left : The anticipation rises as the seniors enter the auditorium. Finally their hard work at Niles West will be honored.

Below: As she walks up to the stage to recieve her diploma, Sherry Abraham ('04) smiles at the thought of all her memories at Niles West. Although she is leaving, Sherry knows Niles West has paved a bright future for her.

Below: Brad Wilson and Michael Conroy come to congratulate their former students as well as the rest of the 2004 class. The Niles West faculty presence at graduation fills the air with a sense of pride.

Left: "Every year, when I look around at all the parents, it makes me realize how proud they are, especially in cases where the child is the first to graduate high school in the United States."Sharon Swanson

Far Left: The ceremony ends and these four graduates run out, with diploma in hand, overwhelmed with joy. Next, they will celebrate their years together.



The energy level in the gym was overwhelming. Students were eager to hear who would be crowned Homecoming King and Queen; little did they know, they had a surprise in store for them. Rashard Mendenhall was chosen to play in the 2005 U.S. Army All-American Bowl. A few moments later the successful athlete was crowned Homecoming King, and Claudine Koma was crowned Queen. Later at the dance, spirits were still high even though the Wolves had a disappointing loss to New Trier. Nonetheless, everyone had an enchanting evening and left the dance... Happily Ever After.

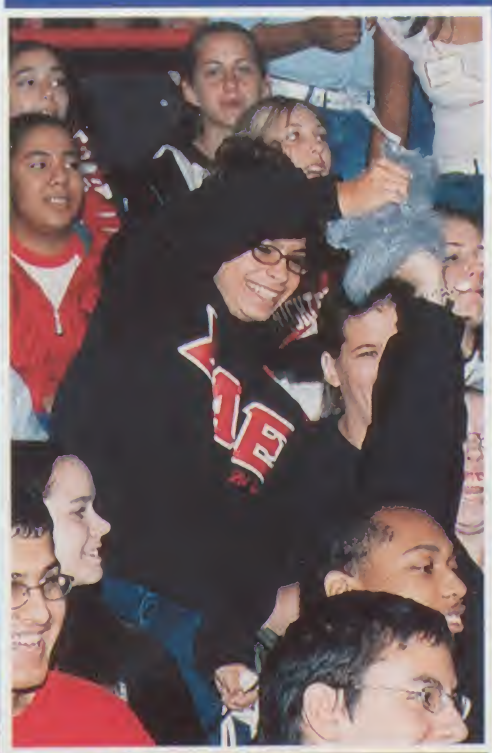
Practicing their royal wave, Homecoming Queen Claudine Koma and King Rashard Mendenhall flash their pearly whites to spectators as they ride along on their float.

Homecoming

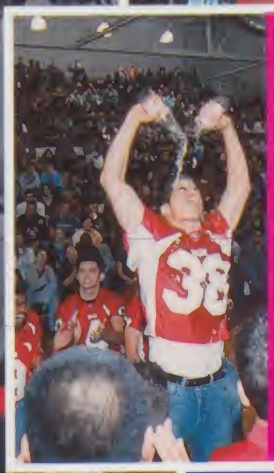
Once Upon a Time...

Left: Enjoying themselves at the dance, seniors Teresa Guerrero and Christopher Villaraza show other dates how to really get down.

Below: Catching her balance, Jennifer Zagorski (06') is happy to have caught a furry friend thrown into the stands during the pep assembly.



Below: These three pigs sure know how to rock, as they jam out on their theatre float. Could they be hiding from the big bad wolf?



Left: Is it possible for one student to get the whole school revved up? David Petrovic ('05) sure can, as he pours juice all over himself. Talk about school spirit!
Far left: Ew, a bug! No, it's just the varsity girls' volleyball team showing off their "float;" that is, their coach's car.

The diverse cultures at Niles West are what make the "Home of the Wolves" stand out. Since the school encompasses such a variety of countries, it dedicated a day to the clubs that represent them. Each club was given a chance to perform for the community an aspect of its culture. They definitely rose to the challenge, as the audience was stunned by the array of colorful costumes and variety of talent. Everyone in the audience made a trip around the globe and learned something along the way.

Above: Jenelle Jara ('07) seems awfully happy to be a part of the Filipino Club's performance. She smiles giddily, enjoying every minute she's on stage. Right: The entire audience gives the Russian Club a round of applause after their stellar performance.

The night of the Induction ceremony for National Honor Society was an exciting and much anticipated event. After years of commitment to being a model student and an active member of the community, each member was rewarded by being inducted into this prestigious society. The Induction committee was doubly rewarded by seeing all of their planning finally pay off in a beautiful ceremony that was praised by everyone in attendance. The evening was unsurpassed in meaning and recognition.

Are you a good boyfriend or girlfriend? Take the quiz and find out.

1.Your significant other calls you and invites you to meet his or her parents:
- A. You pretend that you are sick and go out with your friends.
- B. Of course! You wouldn't miss it for the world.
- C. You go, but you would rather be somewhere else.

2. You are invited to a party, but your boyfriend/girlfriend wants to spend the night in. You:
- A. Say that you have a family emergency, and go to the party.
- B. Skip the party, stay in watching movies and eating popcorn with your boyfriend/girlfriend.
- C. Even though you would rather be at the party, you stay in with your boyfriend/girlfriend so they do not get mad.

3. You already have plans with your friends, when your boyfriend/girlfriend calls to hang out. You:
- A. Would rather spend time with your friends, so you tell him no.
- B. Invite him to go out with you and your friends.
- C. Ditch your friends to hang out with your boyfriend, although you would rather be partying it up with your friends.

See page 116 for your results!

Right: Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles! More like turtle. It seems as though Catlin Coursey and Stacy Gates are ready to take on the one and only teenage mutant ninja turtle, Lauren Lamanna.
Top: Trying to learn their music, Hae Young and Jane Lee work hard to play in the Niles West orchestra.
Middle: Judging by the look on Niel Patel's face, it doesn't seem like he's doing homework.
Bottom: While Jerome Cases, Andjela Pekez, and Ruhi Ahmed are busy focusing on their teacher, Ramn Eisha is busy trying to hide himself from the camera. He makes it seem as though he is really interested in the vocabulary book.

Answers from quiz on page 113:

Mostly A: You tend to choose other people over your significant other. It is suggested that you shape up and start spending more time with your boyfriend/girlfriend before you lose him/her.

Mostly B: You seem to be a very devoted boyfriend/girlfriend; you're always willing to drop everything to spend time with him/her. However, we suggest that you don't get too clingy because you don't want to be spending every day with him/her.

Mostly C: On the outside it may look like you two are a good couple, but on the inside you can't stand being around him/her all the time. You would rather be spending time with your friends, or doing something else. Although it may seem like you are doing a good thing by pretending to like him/her, we suggest that you tell your boyfriend/girlfriend, so that neither one of you ends up wasting each other's time.

You think you know, but you have no idea... Meet the Support Staff

1. Marge Sikorski, Computer Lab Supervisor for the past eight years, considers her job to be very important because she "is here to aid students in whatever way [she] can." She wishes people would treat the building as if it were their home and strongly dislikes it when students are disrespectful towards her for trying to do her job.
2. Susan Arcus is the science lab coordinator who loves the school, even though her worst experience was when she opened a box in the storage room to find a package of vacuum sealed rats looking back at her!
3. Kelly Kyle trains teachers, staff, and administrators on all the software used in the district, as well as finding new technologies to implement into the school. She says that the worst experience that she has had here is being mistaken for a student.
4. Rosalie Croon has been working here for the past three years as the IRC supervisor, keeping it quiet and helping the students whenever and however she can. Her most memorable moment was when a student left his fundraising money and candy in the IRC. Another student found it and returned it, so it got back to its owner safely. She felt proud of Niles West's students' integrity.
5. Nancy Ouska works in the College Resource Center and devotes her time to helping students and pointing them into the right direction by giving them information about different colleges and universities. She encourages students to listen to the daily announcements because a lot of information is given (about the CRC).

Support Staff Favorite Moments

"In 1990, Niles West was recognized as a school of excellence by the U.S. Department of Education. To celebrate, the principal asked that we organize an ice cream social for the students and staff. We planned to serve the ice cream in the student cafeteria; my thought was that since it was December, we could keep the frozen ice cream in the courtyard outside the cafeteria. I didn't anticipate that we would have a warm spell that year- - we ate lots of (melting) ice cream fast!"

- Patricia Moir (Principal's Assistant)

"Walking into class on a dark and rainy day (soaking wet from not having an umbrella), one of my students said, "Gee, Mrs. Hatch, you look pretty in pink, just like bubble gum." It no longer mattered how wet I was or how gloomy the day would be, I felt terrific! Since then, I've been told I look great in orange, like a basketball, or nice in green, like flubber. Every morning when I decide what to wear, I often think of what I might be compared to."

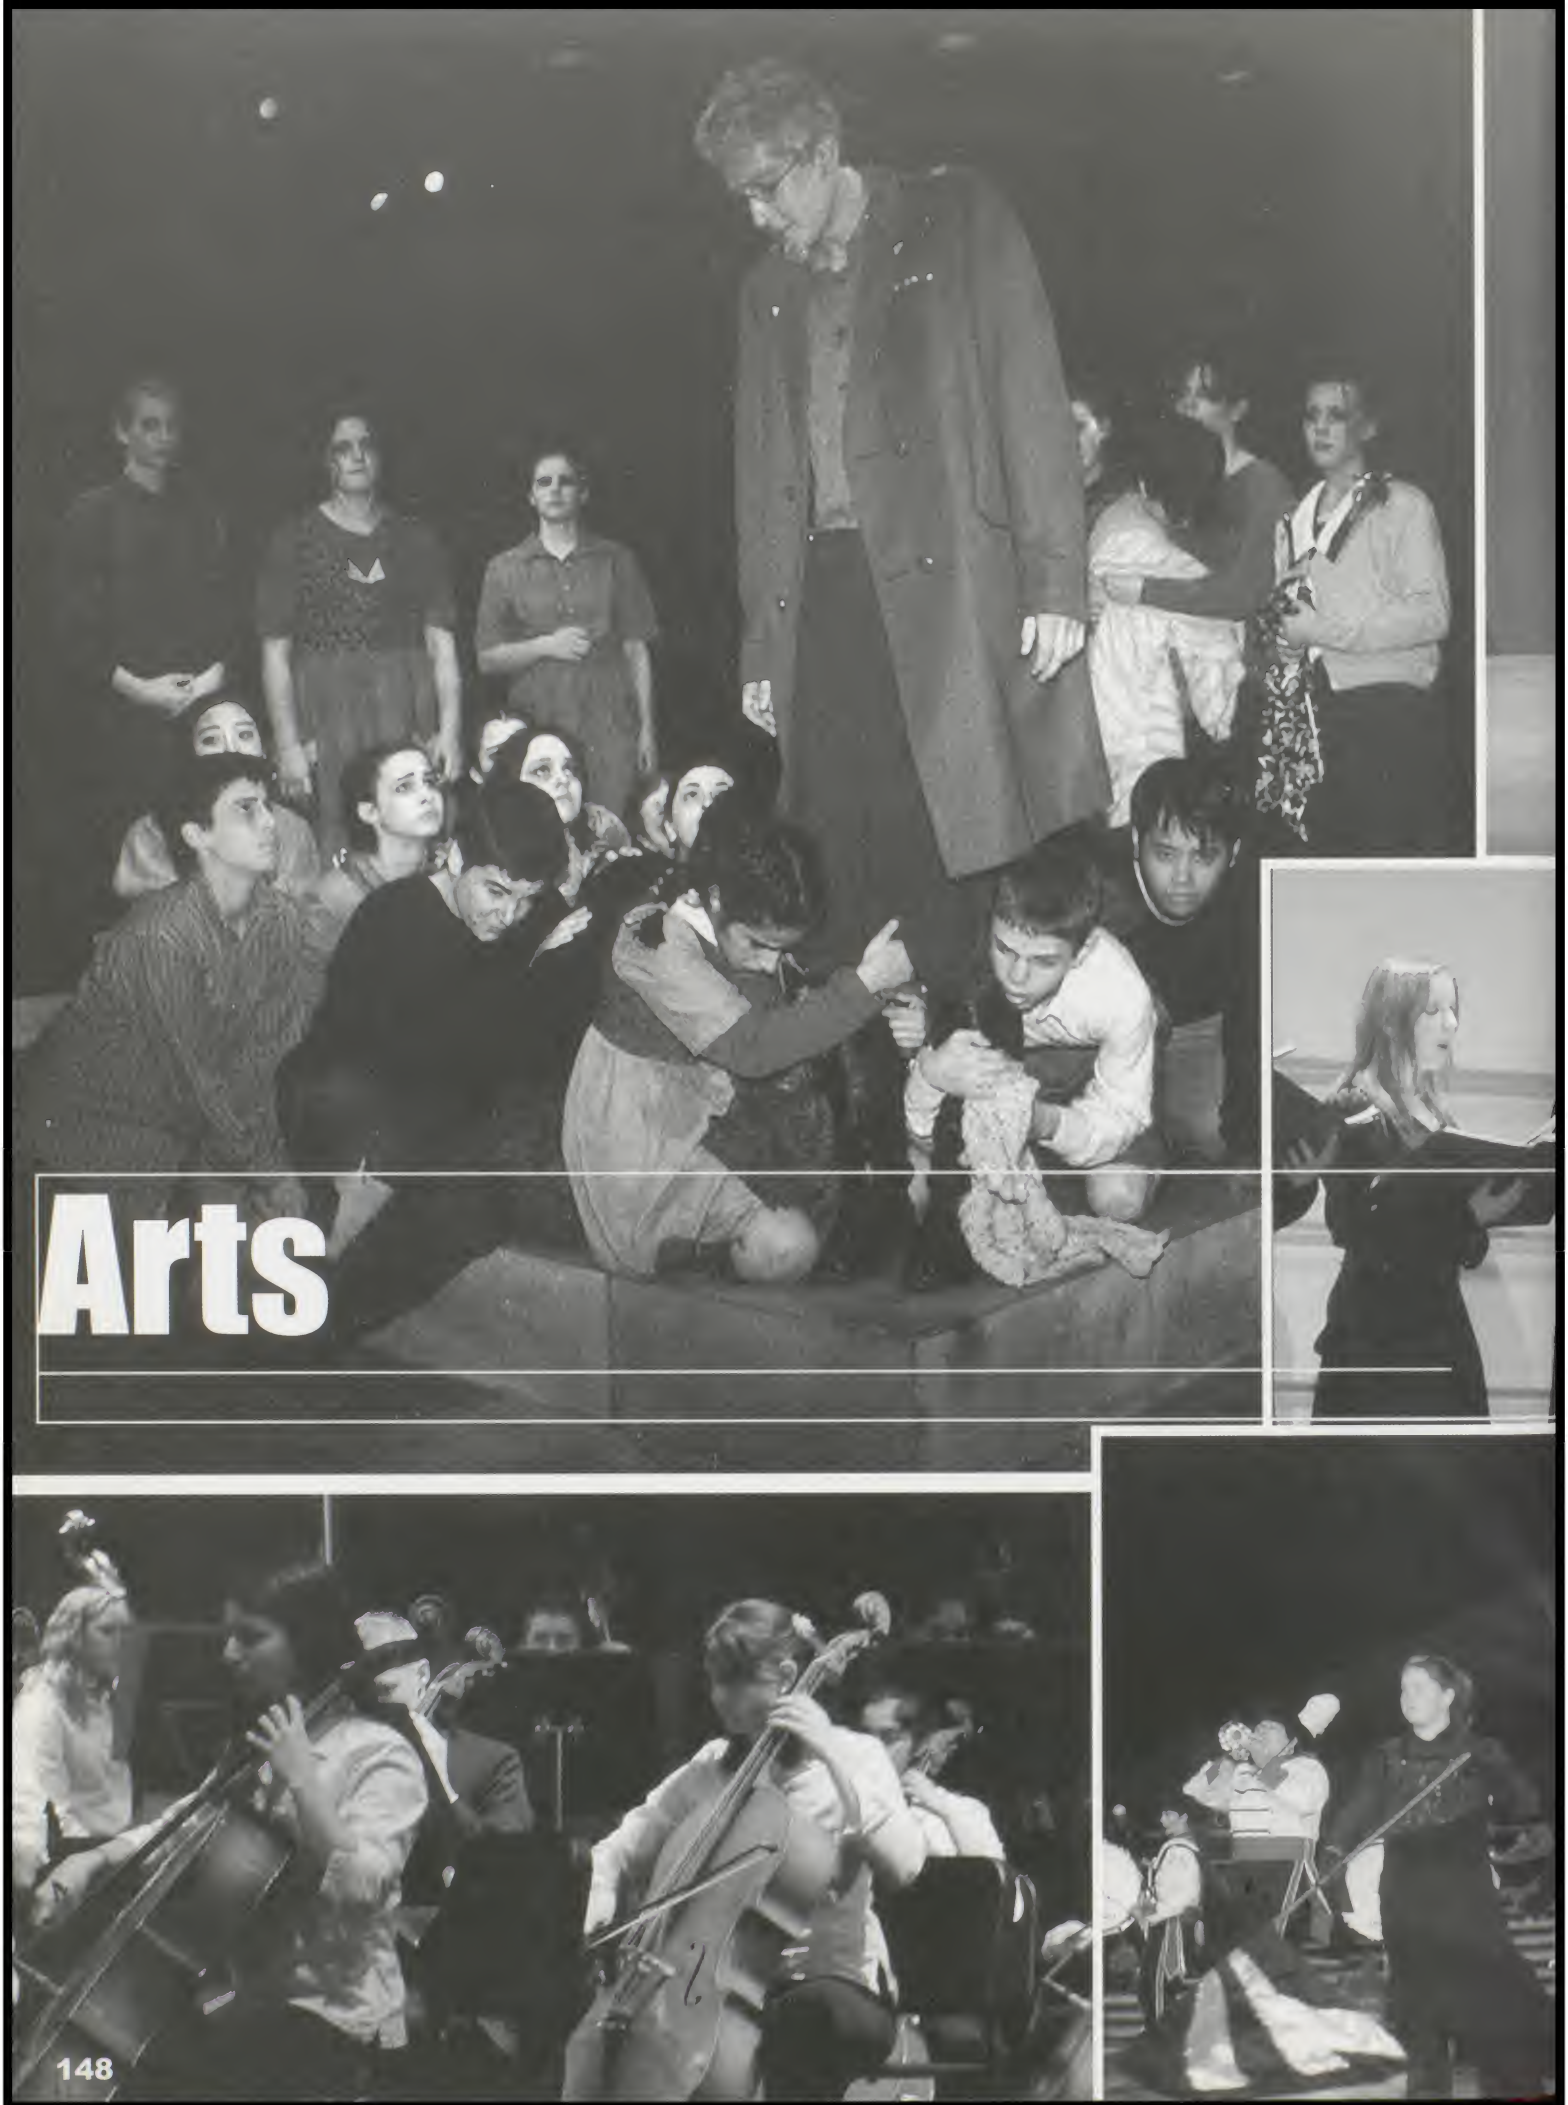
- Teresa M. Hatch (Special Education)

"During a recent lockdown, after ushering students into my office conference room and instructing them to be as quiet as possible, I took attendance and told them we would have to wait until we heard the all clear announcement. After at least 20 minutes and no announcement, I finally ventured a peek out the door to find that school had been back in session for at least 10 minutes! I had forgotten that the P.A. system in my room was broken."

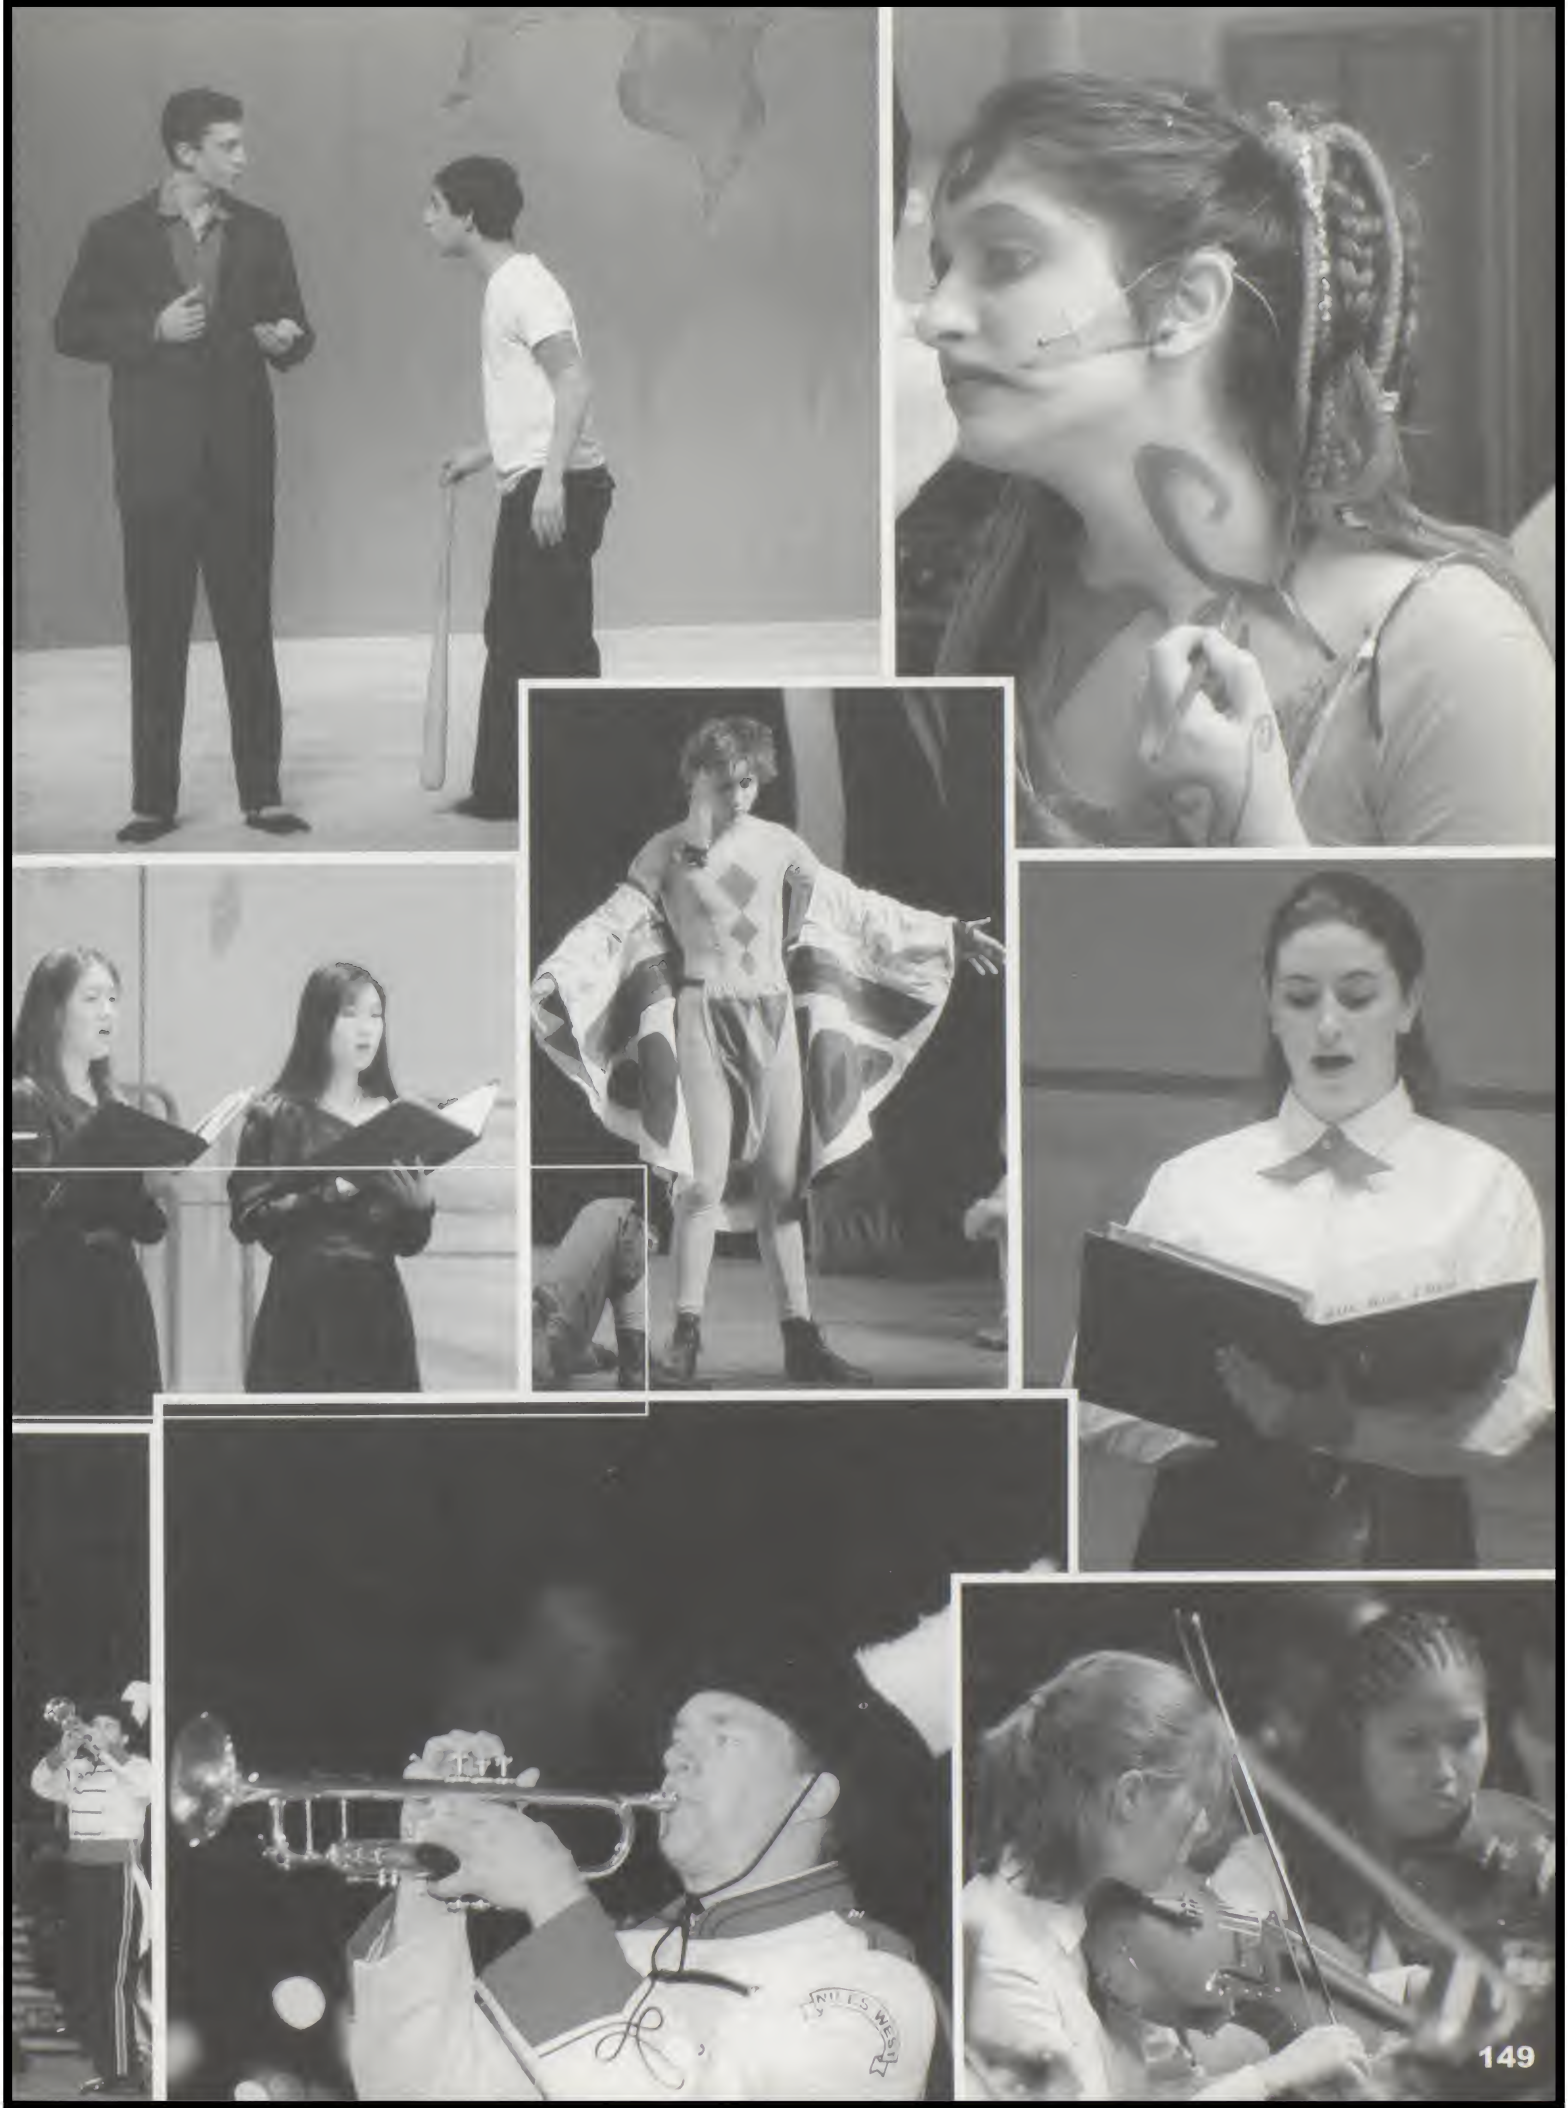
-Arlene Bracken (Student Services)

"The worst experience I can think of was having the sewer, which is right next to my desk, opened for maintenance. We had to vacate the office for two days!"

-Cynthia Kukla (Student Activity Center)



Arts



Above: There is nothing like the heightened rush of being on stage. Jacob Strassberger ('07) is clearly elated with his performance.

Below: With that flaming red hair and the great music, no one can say that band is boring. Eric Grabowski's ('07) personality really stands out.

One Band, One Sound

The furrowed brows, the sharp eyes-- Athena Davros ('07) knows that concentration is crucial to being a great musician. She focuses only on her music.

On any given day in the band room, the students can be seen laughing and joking around. That is what band is all about--making friendships, having fun, and playing great music. It also presents students with many chances to have new experiences. The Concert Band, Symphonic Band, and Symphonic Wind Ensemble got the chance to meet band students from Camberwell High School in Melbourne, Australia. The Australian students stayed at the homes of Niles West students and played with them in the winter concert. Besides learning about each other's cultures, students saw that music is truly universal.

"Meeting the Australian band students and having them stay over was a unique experience I'm grateful for."

Play it Loud

How can Timothy Massoth ('07) play the drums with that hat strap in his face? It must be uncomfortable, but it obviously doesn't faze him–he performs his part flawlessly.

What may feel like a sweltering hot summer day to anyone else is nothing to the marching band members, decked out in wool uniforms during rehearsal. But each day's long hours paid off in the fall, when they lit the crowd up with hits of Stevie Wonder during the football games. Pop 'n Rock ruled the winter, revving up the crowd for basketball games. They didn't have to deal with wool uniforms, but they did have to stand those uncomfortable bleachers and stuffy gyms. Both groups never gave less than a flawless performance, though, and we thank them for that.

> "There's no better feeling than being under the lights playing great music every Friday night."

Jazz Band members are the competitive ones. They travel to different competitions and concerts to show their stuff, never failing to impress even the toughest judge.

What is your favorite memory?

"The overall experience of band was exciting– going places and doing new things. I am going to miss it so much."
Carolynn Witt ('05)

"Jazz band allows us to play different types of music, go to competitions, and hang out with our friends."
Patrick Perez ('05)

"Throughout four years of marching band I've been given the opportunity to enjoy numerous world class experiences."

Let the Voices Be Heard

Joanna Park ('07) and Benjamin Hofeld ('07) sing with the rest of the Concert Choir during their first concert this year.

The Niles West Choir sings a variety of music each year. They practice daily during class at school to prepare for their seasonal concerts. They sing at these concerts, as well as singing for whomever needs talented voices at a sports event or elsewhere. The choir classroom is a place where people can share their love for music with others who have similar interests. During their concerts, Choraliers, Concert Choir, Chamber Choir, and Master Singers all perform songs they have practiced within their own groups. In the end they all come together for the finale.

> "Choir has been amazing for the past two years. I loved performing in Pasta 'n Pops."
> KELLY MCDERMOTT ('07)

These girls know how to enunciate when they sing. Standing up straight and learning how to broaden your mouth are the first steps.

Left: Elana Friedland ('07), Valerie Papillon ('05), and Jenna Temkin ('08) sing the solo appointed to them because they proved they had the best voices for it.

Below: These Master Singers practice singing before their show to make sure they are in perfect harmony and in sync with each other.

What is your favorite memory?

"Choir wasn't just a place I could go to and sing, but a place where I made friends to last a lifetime"

Brandy Trafman ('06)

"It was all such a great experience. I will always remember performing in the concerts and how nerve-wracking it was."

Kyle Greenan ('07)

"Although I have only been on choir for a year, I have already become very close with the choir members."

Alexandra Solomon ('08)

Above: In order to become great musicians, these symphonic orchestra members dedicate almost an hour per day to practice for their concerts. Here, their conductor, Mr. Katz, prepares them for their fall concert.
Bottom: Look at how well Sara Turk ('06) and Joseph Fontalera ('07) are playing their violas. They obviously practiced a lot.

A Love of Music

Being a bass player isn't easy. Jessica Guiang ('06) skillfully plays the instrument that she knows best.

The Niles West Orchestra program proudly holds over 200 members, and is one of the largest high school programs in the state. Throughout the year, the orchestra performs in three concerts, competes in solo and ensemble competitions, and offers individual students an option to be a part of Illinois Music Educators Association, a highly selective orchestra composed of Illinois' best musicians. Students that choose to audition for IMEA work closely with private teachers and the orchestra director, Steven Katz. This year's all-state IMEA musicians included Dan Borkowski ('07) and Michael Chon ('05).

> "We are very blessed to have a large number of talented musicians at Niles West."

Senate and Student Union

Seniors Kathleen Bolano and Emilia Antezana discuss the plan for the turnabout dance. These girls are working hard to decorate the school.

Where would Niles West be without the Student Senate and Union? The members of Student Union organize and plan pep assemblies, spirit weeks, and several school dances, as well as numerous fundraisers for school events. Members of Student Senate worked vigorously to ensure that school rules and regulations were fair for everyone. Their main focus this year was the new proposed period schedule. They also tried their best to try to get the teachers' union and the Board of Education to settle on the contract for the sake of the students. With their great attitude, these students promote school spirit as well as involvement.

"It's nice being able to get involved with what goes on in our school."

AMILA GOLIC ('06)

Cabinet

Emilia Antezana ('05) gets prepared for the next week by informing the seniors of the next meeting during mods14-16.

What are you doing during mods 14-16? If you're not at cabinet, get there and have your voice be heard. Cabinet is a branch of student government that assists in improving the school. This year, all four cabinets contributed to the community in some way. Whether it was buying toys for unfortunate children or planning senior prom, they all took great pride in representing their class. During the aftermath of the tsunami, the cabinets showed their support by immediately having a fundraiser for the victims and their families. Through various events like these, the four cabinets give the students a sense of "doing good" while here at Niles West.

> "Cabinet has been a significant part of my four years here at West."
> Swati Patel ('05)

Left: "Planning prom can be hectic, but quite fun, " says Amila Golic ('06).

Below: For some people, extracurricular activities are just time consuming. For Swati Patel ('05), however, they make her day.

What is your favorite memory?

"The best time was when we bought toys for the kids during Christmas."
Royce Cyriac ('07)

"Always getting out of homeroom."
Amber Stoker ('07)

"It's sad we didn't win the Switchfoot concert, but it was lots of fun trying."

Below: Nina Tiberi ('06) takes a bite out of an apple and mysteriously overhears the plot to trap Romeo.

"Romeo and Juliet"

Romeo, played by Christopher Aler ('06), looks deep into the eyes of Juliet, played by Jennifer Darling ('07). This scene keeps everyone at the edge of their seats.

"Romeo, wherefore art thou, Romeo?" Does this sound familiar? Maybe in Freshman English class?

"Watching the sword fights were amazing!"

JULIA DANKANICH ('07)

"Romeo and Juliet," the classic play, was performed at Niles West by our very own talented actors. This was the first play of 2004-2005 and it was a hit. Seeing the love unfold between the two young people in the new "black box" theater made the audience members feel as if they were, in fact, in the Elizabethan era. Christopher Aler ('06) and Jennifer Darling ('07), playing Romeo and Juliet, set the bar for future performances. The play was a wonderful way to start off the year.

While waiting to fight, Christopher Aler ('05) and his crew sit and watch the beautiful Juliet.

Left: "It was a lot of hard work and fun but being the lead role was not all that it was cracked up to be... or not to be." Christopher Aler ('06)

Below: The Friar played by Lev Kalmens ('05) joins the two lovers, Romeo and Juliet, in holy matrimony. The audience can feel the tension during this part of the play.

What is your favorite memory?

"I convinced over ten people that I was actually a man."
Lizzy Brodsky ('05)

"It was nice playing someone who was over fifty."
Michael Ardashnikov ('05)

"I was Friar Lawrence and memorized my giant monologue the night before the show opened."
Lev Kalmens ('05)

"Swords are fun."
Joseph Miller ('06)

Above: What are they doing? It sure doesn't look like they're practicing lines! Maybe it's a good luck charm before going on stage.

Below: Joseph Miller ('06) gets to play every child's dream, a famous baseball player. He does such a good job that his performance makes Jacob Saleh ('06) look on in amazement.

"Patchwork"

Dancing and stomping, the actors in this scene use interpretive dance and singing to give the scene a little flavor.

Acting takes hard work and a lot of perseverance. It also takes time, bravery, and good communication. The actors in the Niles West theater department demonstrate these qualities.

"I never knew a children's show could be so violent."

AARON W. JORDAN

In the children's play, they all had to come out of their normal personalities and become totally different people, or in this case, animals. Some people had to be birds, others had to be Eskimos. They had to become the characters mentally and physically. A part of getting into the character is wearing costumes and putting on makeup. In the children's play, funky costumes and colorful makeup were worn by the cast. The Niles West theater students really shined in "Patchwork," and showed how normal teenagers can change and become mythical creatures.

Putting on makeup and dressing up makes a character come to life. Angela Kastanes ('06) transformed from a Niles West junior into a mythical character.

Left: Sarah Perlmuter ('05) looks so cute as she plays a little girl in the play. She sits on the bed and listens to her grandmother tell fairy tales.
Below: It's a bird, it's a plane, no it's Daniel Rosenthal ('05) playing a bird in the children's play.

What is your favorite memory about the children's play?

"This is the first show I have directed. It was a really great experience which has inspired me to go into directing in college and on."
Lev Kalmens ('05)

"The first student-directed film that I know of that was actually good."
Mike Ardashnikov ('05)

"Glub Glub."
Joseph Miller ('06)

A Piece of My Heart

Calli Leventis and Nina Tiberi find each other at the Vietnam Veterans Memorial and are overcome by their emotions as they remember all that they went through.

This year's winter play, entitled "A Piece of My Heart" by Shirly Lauro, was based on a book of the same name written in 1986 by Keith Walker. While the book recounted the stories of twenty-six women who served in the Vietnam War, the play follows six of them through their experiences before, during, and after it.

"I think that this was one of the best plays Niles West theater has done."

SAM PARK ('05)

Theater director Carrie Dabelow really wanted to make this play "come alive" for the students, not just because it shows what happened then, but also because it shows what's happening now. Stephanie Richards, a guest director from the Actors' Collaborative Theater in Kentucky, was brought in to help develop characters and work with the actors on their breathing techniques; the results were obvious.

Andrea Wielgus, Nina Tiberi, and Evelyn Valenzuela rejoice in being able to serve in the army and dream of the places they'll visit as they ride around in their Jeep.

Below: The new recruits look out the window of the plane in awe as they fly to Vietnam.

What is your favorite memory?

"This is the first show that I've been able to play a character who goes through their entire life on stage. It's amazing to watch them grow."

Andrea Wielgus ('06)

"Going through all the rehearsals with such a small cast really made us bond. Learning more about the period, the war, these women, and building our characters has made us all so much closer."

Calli Leventis ('07)

"I gained so much from this experience: a closer bond with the cast and a new look on acting. I walk away from this show with good advice: don't think and don't act."

Diane Teng ('05)

"Move"

For her senior solo, Chloe Castro ('05) gracefully comes out of a straight-leg axel as she dances to "You'll Be in my Heart."

After months upon months of practice, the Orchesis 2005 dance company proudly presented "Move," directed by Mindy Slutzky. The show provided a wide variety of dance, everything from ballet and lyrical to hip-hop and jazz.

"All of our hard work pays off in the end when we hear the curtains opening and the audience screaming."

CHLOE CASTRO ('05)

The company hired four professional choreographers this year to teach some of the numbers in addition to the dances made up by its members. These dances were presented by their choreographers to the company before getting approved, and made up the majority of the show. For many of the members who have taken part in the show throughout their high school careers, the last show is an emotional experience.

Above: This year, ballet made up a good portion of the show. Paul Tabutov ('05) and Anna Vasilenko ('06) amaze the crowd with their technique.
Left: The opening number always makes an impression on the audience. All Orchesis members participate in the opening number, which this year consisted of mainly jazz and hip-hop.

Left: When performing such a graceful number, the dancers must be as precise as possible with their movements. Sima Kalmens and Natalie Canizares show perfect posture.
Below: Heather Harmston ('05) and Andrew Phan ('06) look scary as they get "Freaky." These creative costumes really contribute to the hip-hop style of the dance.

What is your favorite memory?

"Dedication, determination, practice, and the love of movement is Orchesis."
Linda Lim ('05)

"Orchesis is more than just a dance company, it's like one big family. I have made so many bonds with the members this year."
Andrew Phan ('06)

"Being part of this company has been the most amazing experience. I am very sad that it is my last year, and I wouldn't trade it for the world."

SARAH DUCHOJ ('07)

It's the West Word staff, making last-minute changes. The front page is filled with pictures of the picketing teachers on the eve of a possible strike, and the reporters can't wait for the students to read the details of this historical event. They check for column alignment and elimination of serial commas. Friday morning, 7:15 a.m. the staffers travel the hallways, distributing their 16-page newspaper. They are excited to see students reading their articles, and have gained important skills in reporting, writing, design, editing and teamwork.

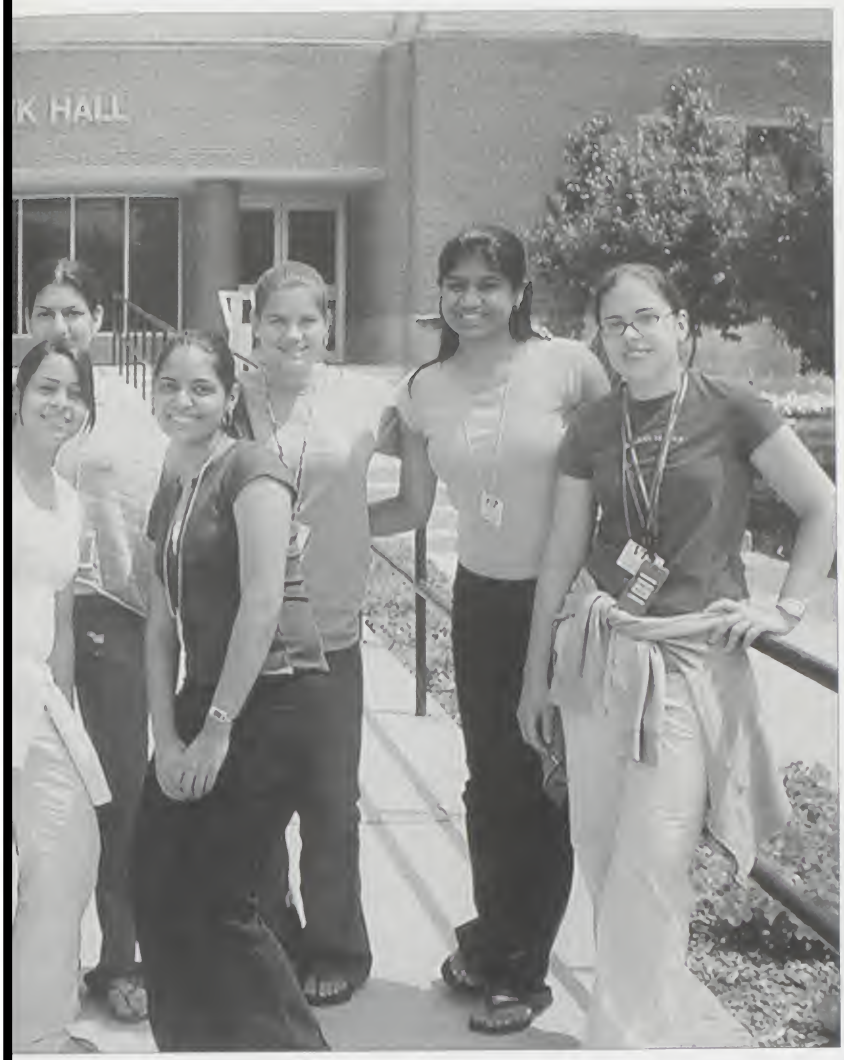
A Yearbook is Forever

Robina Cyriac ('05) and Yvonne Palmer ('05) concentrate on finishing up their pages. It is apparent from the look on Yvonne's face that they have a lot of work ahead of them.

Before we realize it, high school will be over. We will get caught up with other aspects of our lives. Suddenly, we will be forced to focus on our careers and family lives and high school will become a distant spot in our past, a time too far away for us to grasp. And then we may glimpse that dusty yearbook on the shelf. Opening that yearbook, everything will come rushing back--the classes, the teachers, the friends. The yearbook staff works hard to ensure that these memories are not forgotten. From the yearbook camp to the late nights and the hectic deadlines, the yearbook staff puts in countless hours of work to preserve our moment in time. No matter what, a yearbook is forever.

"Opening that yearbook, everything will come rushing back–the classes, the teachers, the friends."



Behind every successful yearbook are great sponsors. In this case, they are Sharon Swanson and Wileen Hsing.

Virginia Palmer ('05)

"Eating sour patches and playing Cranium at yearbook camp. I won't mention what else happened..."

Boys' Cross Country

Scoop

Mark Vega ('06)

"Running is more than just the body; it involves the mind, too."

Benjamin Eng ('07)

"The effort and talent the team showed this season was amazing. Everyone dropped lots of time from race to race."

Bradley Sullivan ('08), one of the best freshman on the team, keeps his pace during the middle of the race, saving some energy for the end of his run.

Ryan Leyba ('07) does his last lap as fast as he can, finishing three miles and almost breaking sixteen minutes.

Above: It's important to make sure one's shoes are tied before beginning to run. No one would want their shoe to come untied while racing.
Left: Walter Villanueva ('07) builds up his speed as he rounds the last corner before reaching the finish line.

Flippin' it up

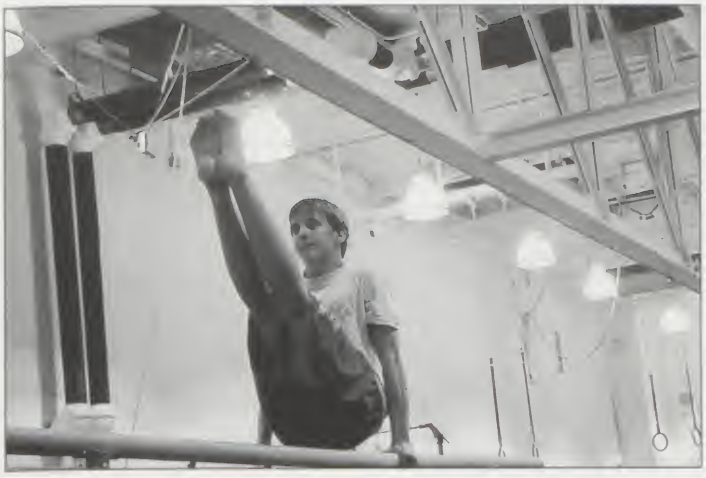
Scoop

Steven Foerch

"Our '04 season was a turning point in one of the most tradition-rich sports at West. Our team laid the groundwork for a resurgence of talented and tenacious athletes."

Michael Troop

"They are such a great bunch of guys and it's amazing how they are able to progress so quickly without any prior experience of the sport."



Jonathan Mueller ('07) demonstrates his strength by doing this V-hold on parallel bars.

Flyaways, backflips off high bar, are as scary as they look; after all, there is some danger involved. If you let go too soon, you'll have a hard time rotating and probably land flat on your face. Let go too late, and you'll hit the bar. Alex Sacha ('05) lets go at the right time and sticks the landing. Look out for the next Paul Hamm!

Above: Sultan Budwhani ('05) uses tremendous arm and abdominal strength to perform this plonge on parallel bars.

Richard Foerch ('05) improves his flares by working on the mushroom. The mushroom is good practice for pommel horse because one doesn't have to worry about hitting the pommels. But it can't teach him to point his toes!

Scoop

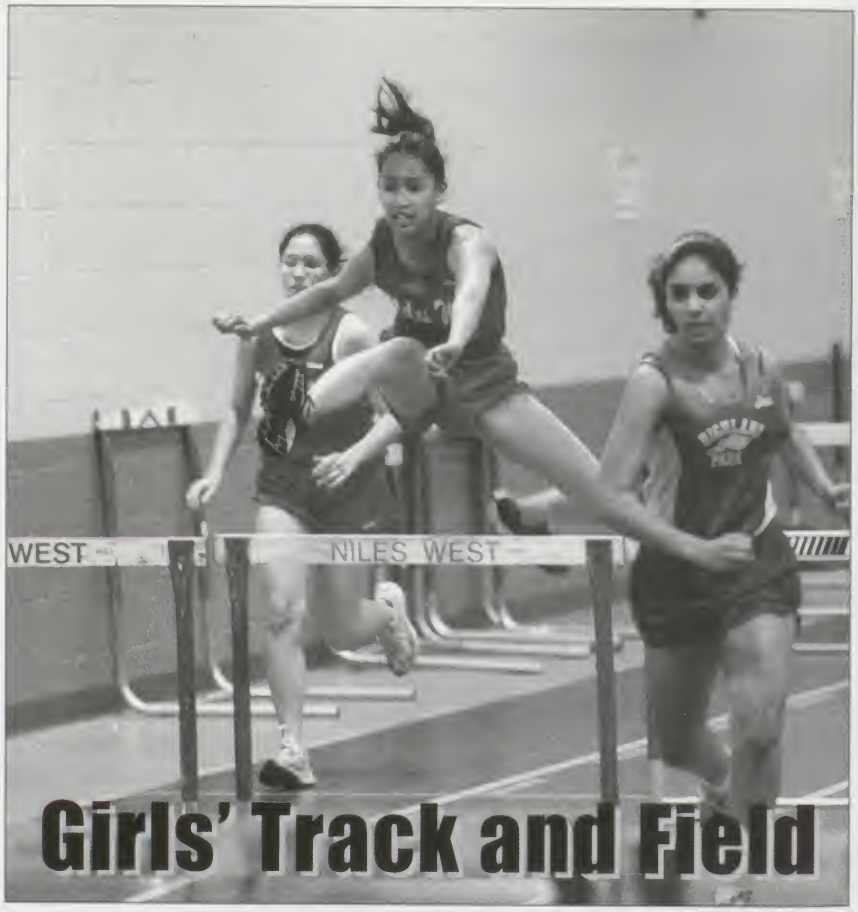
Mark Medland

"The girls work hard, and are willing to meet with their coaches in order to reach their goals."

Yvonne Palmer ('05)

"It was an awesome feeling when Julia Varsamis cleared 10'6" in pole vault to qualify for the state meet! I can't wait for this season to start."



Girls' Track and Field

"Sika! Saka!"

Look at that form! As a state qualifer, Julia Varsamis (04') excelled in the fundamentals of track and field. This vault qualified her for the state meet.

On your mark, get set, GO! At the shot of the gun, Brandy Harrison ('05) takes advantage of a head start over her opponents at the Niles West Invite. From the look in her eyes, she sees nothing but victory.

Above: Getting a powerful lead is crucial to the race. It's obvious that Jaimie Lau ('07) and Marie Valme ('07) realize this, as they concentrate before the race starts. Special Senior Horoscope

Time to say goodbye to Niles West. Although you may be feeling a bit down because you'll have to bid adieu to many excellent friendships at the end of the summer, summer is only just beginning, so be sure to make the best of your time. Cherish these moments, because it's likely that you won't be seeing these people for another ten years. But don't be stuck looking back at your past. You have your whole future ahead of you. Congratulations, Class of 2005!

May 21-June 21

Happy Birthday Gemini! So after a year of endless studying and lack of sleep, you're ready to have a great summer. Don't forget to throw a summer birthday bash. You're going to visit that exotic place you saw on the Travel Channel a long time ago, and you're going hit the amusement parks all summer long. It'll be great, but make sure you reserve some quality time to spend with your family--you'll find them unusually bearable. Go out and meet some new people too. Do new things and interact with others. It'll do you good.

June 22-July 22

Have you ever wondered what the meaning of all this is? That is, the meaning of high school, not life. If your thoughts have not yet ventured beyond the safe universe of homerooms and five minute passing periods, you should, because it's all about college. It's time for you to start thinking about the next couple of years. A trip to the College Resource Center and a talk with your counselor are in order. Enjoy.

Stop growling. Complaining won't do you any good, and you know it. Yes, you have had your share of mortifying tribulations lately (a slip in the Hall of Honor in front of everybody, and a C on the math test!) but that doesn't mean you should give way to your depressive emotions. Strong and confident, you know what you want and you go after it. So get up and cast off thy gloomy countenance. Do whatever it takes to be the happy and content person that you usually are. You know you won't regret it.

July 23-August 22

August 23-September 22

This summer, you should really just relax. This entire year, your energized personality has worn you out. The constant desire to join different activities and to lend your hand has overworked you. Really just focus on yourself. You will need to restrain yourself from loading up with stressful jobs and positions, but once you find yourself with that extra time on your hands, you'll find you're happier and more productive. Spend some time warming up on the beach or cooling down at an old-

Ah, the Great Balancer. You definitely know how to juggle. You have the good grades, challenging classes, caring friends, a bundle of extracurricular activities under your belt, a job at Jewel-- everything you need to be happy and content. But it takes work having everything, doesn't it? Sometimes you feel like you just can't do it all anymore. So take a break. After that exhausting basketball practice or long Engineering Club meeting, go out and have some fun. Take your friends to Crown and watch that movie you never seem to have time to see. Or go to that restaurant you always pass on your way to work.

September 23-October 22

October 23-November 21

Ouch, have you got a hot temper. You always feel the need to speak your mind, whether that means admonishing the lunch ladies on the poor state of the fries today or passionately arguing about Jay Gatsby's immoral love of wealth in English class. But you forget that your blunt honesty can hurt others. Take care to keep that acerbic tongue in check.

Isn't it nice having a job and not having to ask your parents for money anymore? True, they do pay for that $300 parking permit, but you really are the shining example of hard-earned independence. Don't let things get to your head. Limit the Old Orchard shopping sprees and enormous Starbucks expenditures-- yes, that does include frappuccinos. It would do you good to save some of that money for things you really want.

November 22-December 21

Always the fiery one, you're looking to have some fun and do something adventurous. Whether it's going to the park by yourself or backpacking through the Rocky Mountains, you're going to have fun. But be careful-- too much of a good thing could be harmful. Know how to have fun, but be prepared, too. Have that ATM card with you in the Rockies for back-up, and don't stay out too late.

December 22- January 19

January 20-February 18

Sigh. The end of the school year is here, and you're ready to hit the beach (or Oakton Pool) and forget such a thing as school ever existed. And that's great. But that shouldn't comprise all of your summer activities. The summer can be a great time for things that take a back seat to that ever-climbing pile of homework that amasses during the school year. Maybe a job is the answer. Or hands-on exploration of Chicago-- you know you want to visit the Art Institute. Whatever it is, your summer should consist of more than extended couch-potato hours. You'll feel more refreshed and energized when you come back at the end of August.

You're the open-minded friend everybody wants. You're always ready to listen to others' opinions, if that means lending your ears to a discussion on the current situation in the Middle East or a heated debate on whether hats should be allowed in school. But your tranquil demeanor shouldn't obstruct your self-expression. Deep down inside, you really do care about that hat debate. So get energized and join Student Senate!

February 19-March 20

So when's the last time you did anything spontaneous? Writing down your homework assignments in a new color doesn't count. Neither does taking a different route to the café. It's time for you to let that color-coded assignment notebook be and just go with the flow. Try something completely new for a change. It's not going to cost you anything, and you might even like living on the wild side.

March 21-April 19

Only the front of the pack will suffice for you, your forte. Whether it's a group project in Ms. Konsewicz, you pride yourself on stepping up, fine and dandy, but what are you going to do to as that CEO, the head of that nonprofit start working now. Take that Community Service volunteer activities at your nearby soup kitchen, lead.

April 20-May 20

eh? Leadership is your natural characteristic; Hsing's English class or Adventure Ed with Mr. taking charge, and making decisions. That's all maximize your potential? If you foresee yourself organization, or that master politician, you have to class you've been thinking about, engage in or start a club- get out to the front of the pack and
